HORSE CHESTNUT

In cosmetics the horse chestnut seeds extract is used for its vasoprotective, anti-inflammatory and draining properties. Particularly suitable for treatment of lower limbs blemishes, such as edema, cellulite and microcirculation's defects.

GUARANA'

The Cuban Paullinia, commonly called Guarana', is an Amazonian shrub that contains choline, catechins, tannins and caffeine. Substances that stimulate thermogenesis, a process by which an increase in energy consumption is determined, helping weight loss. The thermogenesis induced by cosmetic oils and supplements based on Guarana stimulates the adipose tissue and promotes the melting of localized fat deposits.

CAFFEINE

Caffeine plays an important lipolytic action, breaking down the fat contained in fat cells. It gives elasticity and plasticity to the skin, improving its tone and reducing its localized fat deposits and the annoying "orange peel" effect.

ALGA LAMINARIA

The laminaria alga is considered the sea alga par excellence with important stimulating and reducing properties. Thanks to the enormous intake of iodine, it stimulates thyroid activity accelerating fat metabolism, thus promoting the movement of interstitial fluids and gradually reducing cellulite blemishes. It restores tone to the tissues with visible results from the very first applications. Valid and effective aid in the prevention and treatment of imperfections related to localized fat.

CARNITINE

It carries out an important slimming and firming action, thanks to its vessels protective and anti-edematous properties in association
